Mr IKEDA's MANDATE

MR IKEDA's triumph in the Japanese elections goes some way towards reassuring the United States that the riots which took place in the cancellation of President Eisenhower's visit earlier this year did not reflect the majority feelings of the country. The election fought as it was on the Security Treaty issue was a massive vote of confidence in the party which negotiated it. Mr Ikeda did not get quite as many seats as he expected and it will take more than his impressive majority, to allay fears entertained before the campaign, that moderate, democratic forms of government are in jeopardy. The more aggressive of the two socialist parties made decisive gains and even though its representation in the Diet has been cut by the Government, its growing strength is a reflection of the increase in neutral feelings and of a more militant outlook on the part of the left.

WHAT this foreshadows for Japan is hard to tell at the moment. But if it means that the Socialists are going to make themselves more conspicuous outside Parliament than inside, as it was tending to do earlier this year, the precarious balance of Japanese democracy may be seriously impaired. For a rising tide of left-wing violence can only be matched by a corresponding increase in tactical "patrons of the right."

Thirteen years have passed since the democratic constitution was bequeathed to occupied Japan but its political institutions still show no sign of taking root. The ex-soldiers who might have been expected to form a powerful bulwark against the left are declining in power with the years. The Socialists can moreover count on Peking's support to create as many difficulties as possible for the Conservatives and their U.S. allies.

Thus Mr Ikeda's considerable majority gives no grounds for believing that his government is in an unusually strong position to defend its influence to its authority. He would therefore be doing his people a good turn if he regarded his election as a mandate primarily to safeguard democracy. If he makes this his foremost task during his term of office and brings stability and security to Japan he will have done more than any postwar Premier and as much as any of his people could ask of him.

A severe blow to efforts of Communists

United Nations, Nov. 22. The General Assembly voted tonight to seat a Congolese delegation appointed by pro-Western President Joseph Kasavubu.

The vote was 53 to 24 with 19 abstentions. The action was a major boost to President Kasavubu's prestige as leader of the Congolese government and a severe blow to efforts of Russia and its friends to restore to power Kasavubu's ousted leftist Premier, Patrice Lumumba.

The vote was taken on a US-backed recommendation of the Assembly's credentials committee to seat the Kasavubu delegation in preference to one appointed by Lumumba.

Both delegations have been in New York since the start of the session last Sept. 20 but the Assembly, keeping the Congo's seat vacant, recognised neither until tonight.

Decision

It came after the Assembly by a 50 to 32 vote, with 14 abstentions, rejected a crippling amendment submitted by Guinea which would have struck out the credentials committee's recommendation to seat the Kasavubu delegation and would have had the Assembly defer decision on seating either of the rival groups.

Determined opposition to seating Kasavubu's delegation was offered by Russia, India, Ghana and Guinea in the debate which started late last week.

The armed clash between Congolese troops and UN forces in Leopoldville yesterday threatened to upset an Assembly decision on the Congo credentials question.

India charged that the action of the Congo army in firing on a Tunisian contingent of the UN force guarding a Ghanaian diplomat the Congolese government wanted to deport, constituted war waged by the government of the Congo against the United Nations.

An adjournment motion offered by Ghana was defeated.

FLEET CLUB FOKI ON MURDER CHARGE

A 43-year-old tea-boy of the China Fleet Club appeared before Mr Derek Cons at Central Court this morning on a charge of murder.

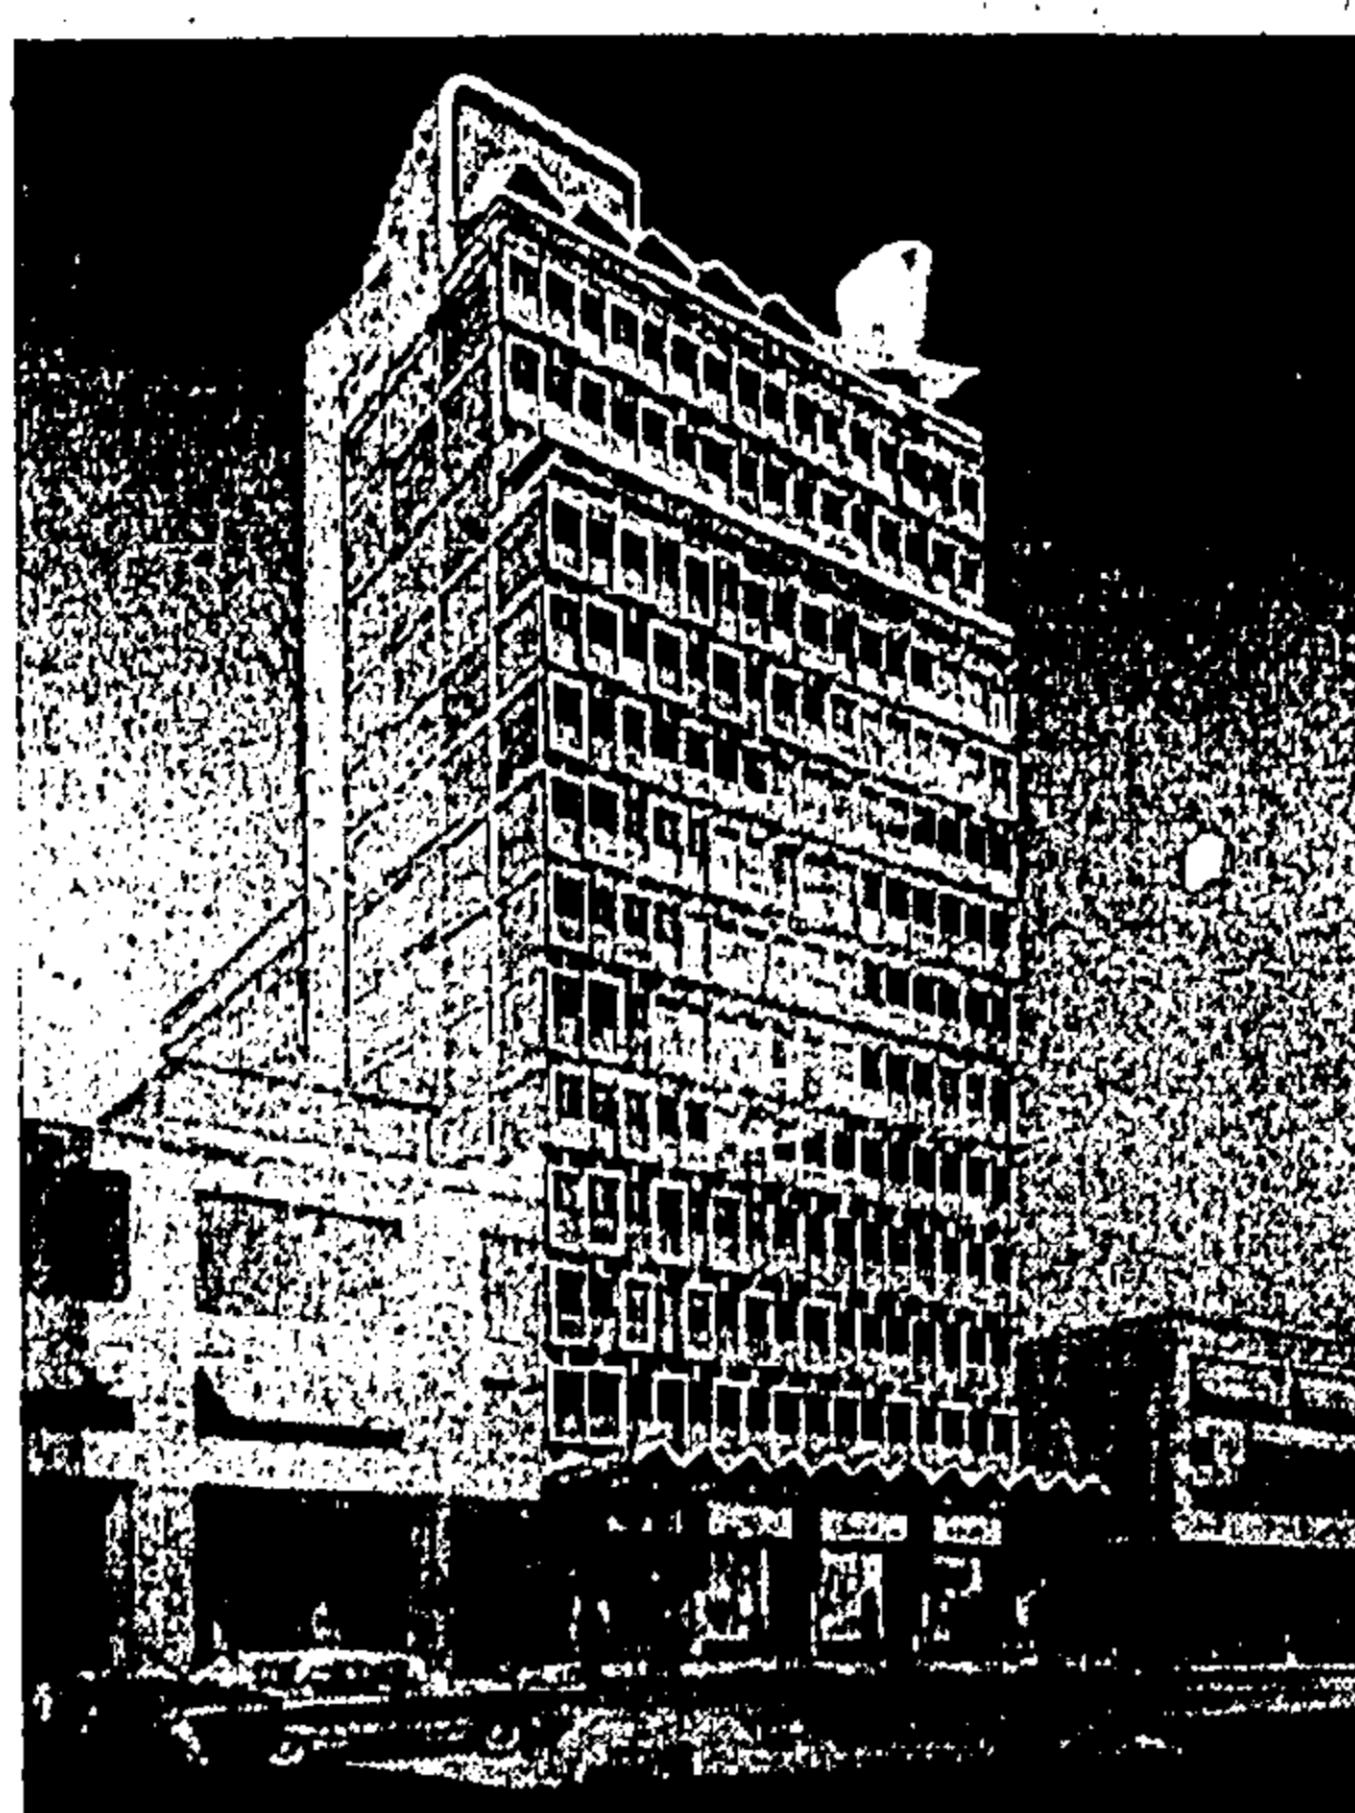

Ip Wan-wah, living at the Chinese Employers' Quarters, China Fleet Club, Gloucester-road, Wan chai, was alleged to have murdered a woman, Wong Ho alias Ah Luk at Causeway Bay Typhoon Shelter last night.

A WIFE

On the charge sheet, Ip was stated to have a wife and two children in Wai Young, a Chinese village.

Detective Sub-Inspector R. L. Russell asked Mr Cons to remand Ip for three days in police custody for further inquiries. This was granted.

No plea was taken.

Another skyscraper for Central

BY A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

Another tall building will add to the rapidly changing skyline of Hongkong when the $2.5 million Cheng Chung Shu Building will spring up opposite Man Yee Building in Queen's-road Central in 16 months' time.

The 14-storey building will be constructed between Queen's-road Central and Stanley-street, with a difference of 20 feet in levels at the front and back of the structure.

It will have two entrances—the main one with a lift lobby on Queen's-road, and a staircase entrance from Stanley-street at the back.

SHOPS

There will be shops on the ground and mezzanine floors with more small shops in the basement off the Stanley-street side.

From the first to the 13th floors will be offices with a total area of 38,500 square feet. The front entrance will feature a double-folding canopy over a widened pavement.

The back entrance will feature an unloading bay for lorries to park inside the building, giving way to traffic on narrow Stanley-street.

On top of the building will be a penthouse for the owner, Mr Cheng Chung-shu, a noted property owner in the Colony.

The new building will add a radical feature to the skyline with its concerina-shaped roof and an elliptical water tank.

Site formation, underway for sometime now, should be completed in another two months. Construction work will start then.

The architect of the new building is Mr W. Szeto.

BRITON'S

3-DAY ORDEAL

Vancouver, Nov. 22. Miner Allan Rose, 27, was reported in serious condition in hospital tonight following his three-day ordeal in a caved-in gold mine.

Rose, who immigrated from Manchester just five weeks ago to make a "quick buck" to set up his own business, survived the 69-hour entombment but suffered a broken right leg, multiple injuries and three severe pressure cuts, each three inches deep.

Doctors said he was in serious condition and were holding him closely for a possible relapse from his ordeal.

Rose was lifted to the pithead earlier in the day. His first report was for a cigarette.—UPI

Tokyo, Nov. 23. The clandestine Pathet Lao Radio, voice of the pro-Communist rebel forces in northern Laos, was quoted today as reporting the defection of a company of right-wing Laotian commandos to Pathet Lao ranks.—UPI

A 'FIRE BRIGADE' FORCE FOR NATO?

Paris, Nov. 22. Urgent establishment of a "fire brigade" force to deal with any threats to flanks of the North Atlantic Alliance area was suggested today in a report prepared for Nato.

The force would be highly mobile and would have tactical atomic or conventional weapons—or both. This recommendation was made in a draft report by the Parliamentarians' military committee and later by the full conference which groups around 200 representatives from the 15 Nato nations.

The report, prepared by Gen. J. H. Couzy of the Netherlands, noted that Nato military planners are considering such a mobile force but that "it is not past the planning stage."

The mobile force, to be transported by air, would serve to eliminate one of the weak spots in the Nato area, particularly on the flanks, the report said.

The southern flank of Nato was singled out as the one most seriously menaced.

The report also urged that the highest priority be given by Nato planners to combating psychological and ideological warfare being waged by the Communist bloc. "Western counter-measures to the present time have been somewhat haphazard and, in many cases, insufficient or entirely nonexistent," the report said.

Lord Rochdale to visit Colony

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

The Chairman of the British Cotton Board, Lord Rochdale, will visit Hongkong next Monday. He will come here from Australia and his visit to the Colony is described as private.

But the China Mail was told by a responsible source this morning: "I imagine he will take the opportunity to ask a few questions, though there is no intimation of what he will do."

For this reason alone Lord Rochdale is likely to find local textile men strongly opposed to any extension of the undertaking.

COMPLAINTS

There have also been complaints in Britain about the failure of Hongkong shippers to deliver various types of cloth, but on investigation these have been found to be caused by the lack of available quota.

The undertaking has thus had unhappy consequences for the British trader and also the consumer.

Commenting on the effect locally of the undertaking, the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce said in a recent report: "It is true that Hongkong itself has shared in the prosperity arising from the worldwide improvement in textile trading conditions generally, but had it not been for this the limitation on shipments might well have had serious results for the Colony."

Lord Rochdale is staying with friends privately while in Hongkong and will be here for about a week.

He visited Hongkong during 1958 to negotiate with local textile men the undertaking to restrict exports.

Lord Rochdale is, in addition to being Chairman of the Cotton Board, the head of the committee set up to administer the Conservative Government's

Lin Piao promoted

Peking, Nov. 23. Marshal Lin Piao has been promoted one degree in the Communist Party hierarchy by stepping from seventh to six position in the 20-man politburo.

The First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Secretariat, Teng Hsiao-ping, goes down from sixth to seventh position, according to the official Chinese year-book for 1960.

These, however, appear to be the only significant changes listed in the year-book just published in Peking.—AFP.

Textile development agency proposed

New York, Nov. 22. The Textile Workers Union of America (TWUA) AFL-CIO, has called on President-elect John F. Kennedy to establish a textile development agency to promote the development of new industrial and consumer uses for textiles products.

The 22-man executive council, at the conclusion of a five-day quarterly meeting here, also criticised textile industry proposals for easing government allowances for depreciation under tax laws.

The Council said the proposals would yield a bonanza in tax savings for textile corporations but could not stimulate economic growth and would result in a raid on the federal treasury without substantial benefit to the public.

The union charged that the Eisenhower administration has neglected the problems of the industry and has refused to implement any of the policy recommendations made last year by a Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce subcommittee headed by Sen. John O. Pastore (Democrat-Rhode Island).

It urged Kennedy to implement the Pastore committee's recommendations with particular emphasis on "the need for a textile development agency which would conduct a programme of basic research to develop new industrial and consumer uses for fibres and fabric."

The Council also called on President Eisenhower to cancel proposed new tariff rates on wood fabric imports and urged institution of a tariff quota system to safeguard the historical level of domestic production; an increase in the 45 per cent ad valorem tariff rate, and withdrawal of the benefit of the income-favoured nation clause from foreign imports manufactured under sub-standard conditions in the country of origin.—UPI.

New York, Nov. 22. Stocks continued their advance today but mostly with only minor gains.

Electronics, steels, foods, electronics and chemicals all stretched their advance fractionally.

Losses of a half or more were in Youngstown, Republic, US Steel and Bethlehem, but softness here was said to reflect generally gloomy steel outlook and the latest prediction which puts operations this week at their lowest level since early July.

Ford gained slightly in response to British approval of the company's plan to acquire complete control of its British subsidiary. Most other motors were down in fractions.

Body of World War II soldier found

Rome, Nov. 22. The body of a U.S. serviceman was found today on a World War II battlefield.

An identification tag on the body bore the name of Robert E. Mayhew and named his next of kin as Marie Mayhew of 56 S. Main St., Perry, New York.

The body was found near Monte Buttaglia (Battle Mountain), a stronghold of the German "Gothic Line" in the Apennines, the scene of bloody battles with the advancing Fifth Army in late 1944 and early 1945.

UNDER FOOTPATH The body apparently lay buried for some 15 years under a foot-path. It was found when torrential rain caused a segment of the path to cave in.

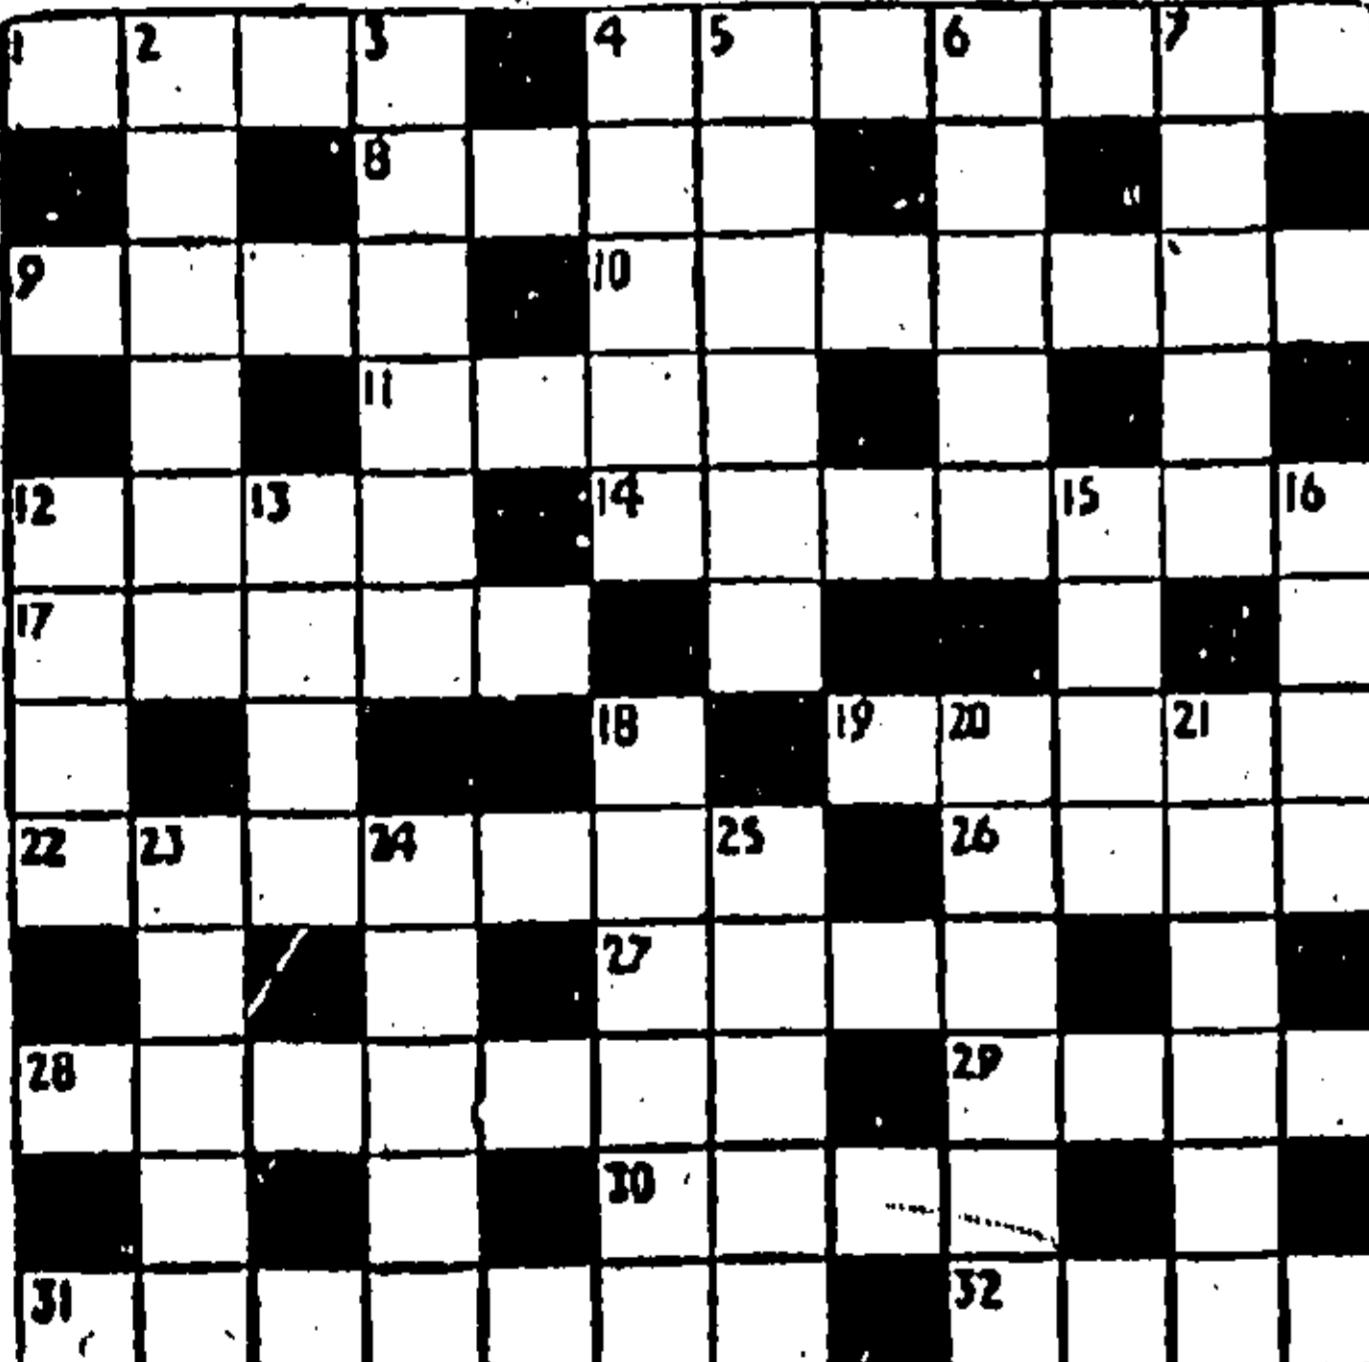

Police took the body to the local police station.

A wrist watch, a rifle, a gold bracelet, a gold wedding ring and the remains of a rifle were found near his body. —UPI.

Paris, Nov. 22. General de Gaulle today appointed Mr Louis Joxe to the new post of Cabinet Minister for Algeria.

Joxe, who has so far been the Minister for Education, will be known officially as "The Minister Delegate for Algerian Affairs."

Flood waters again pour into Frejus

Frejus, Nov. 23. Flood waters once again poured into Frejus tonight, just 10 days before the first anniversary of the Malpasset dam disaster.

The Reyran River, swollen by 25 hours of heavy rains, burst through an earthen dike and flood waters poured into the lower sections of the town.

On December 1, 1959, the Malpasset dam which backed up the waters of the Reyran into an irrigation reservoir above the town burst and the wall of water that destroyed a large part of Frejus killed more than 400 persons.

There was no report of injuries or deaths in tonight's flood although the water reached a depth of 12 feet in some sections of the town. —AP.

She was struck yesterday while standing on a street corner.

Police said a mechanical failure in the truck had caused the erratic case covering to explode, sending the fragments flying. —AP.

Congolese react to battle by arresting, beating up UN men

Leopoldville, Nov. 22. Congolese troops today reacted sharply to the all-night battle around the Ghana embassy by arresting and manhandling UN personnel.

A UN spokesman said: "A large number of UN civil and military officials had been taken into custody."

The Congolese imposed a 6 pm curfew in the capital to prevent further disturbances.

A group of 30 UN men returning from a party were held overnight and at least 12 others were still in Army headquarters in Leopoldville, the UN spokesman said.

Appearing to be acting under orders from superiors, the Congolese stopped UN staff and, in many cases, took their ears.

Staff were advised to stay in touch with security officials for fear of kidnapping.

This afternoon four Congolese weapon carriers rolled to a halt outside UN headquarters and stayed for about 15 minutes as UN Moroccan guards prepared for action.

Kasavubu's UN victory

(Continued from Page 1) But Guinea served notice that it would not serve on the constitution group if Mr Kasavubu's delegation were recognized, and Mati said it would reconsider its membership in the commission.

There was Western speculation that Kasavubu's triumph might mean that the constitution commission now would never go into action. It also was speculated that recognition of Kasavubu's supremacy would lead to the replacement of Rajeshwar Dayal of India, top UN official in the Congo, whose latest report was critical of Kasavubu and Col. Joseph Mobutu, the Congolese army strongman.

Mr Hammarskjold was expected to issue soon an official report on the Leopoldville shooting affray, which resulted in death for at least four Congolese and three Tunisian soldiers. —UPI.

Sukarno given full powers to implement national plans

Djakarta, Nov. 22. President Sukarno today appeared to have assumed more power over this sprawling nation of 92 million than at any time during his 11-year reign.

PRESIDENT SUKARNO

"Like a general whose orders are obeyed by all his men, the Indonesian people must carry out the guidance I will give them," Dr. Sukarno said yesterday when he accepted documents ratifying his political manifesto and eight-year development programme.

Dr. Sukarno's manifesto, which calls for guided democracy, guided economy, Indonesian Socialism and adherence to the 1945 revolutionary constitution, was approved last Saturday by his hand-picked Provisional Peoples Congress.

NO SURPRISE

The approval of the manifesto and the development plan gave Dr. Sukarno full power to implement these programmes in any way he saw fit.

"I am well aware of the burden placed on my shoulders by the loss of life which had occurred and said: 'One point stands out quite clearly. The UN forces resorted to the use of force while exercising their right to self-defence under the UN mandate of military law and order.'

"Every attempt was made by both sides to reach a ceasefire. But in the darkness it was difficult to get orders to the troops," —Reuter.

reach decisions (because it wastes time) and he indicated he might dissolve the body unless it acted on the manifesto with speed.

The ratification on Sukarno's manifesto came as no surprise. He had warned members when the congress convened two weeks ago that they must work speedily. He demanded that there should be no bickering to

Since being elected president in 1949, Sukarno has taken on an increasing number of titles. Many of them representing important jobs formerly held by men in his government. Among these are Prime Minister, Supreme War Administrator, Commander-In-Chief of All Armed Forces, and Chairman of The Supreme Advisory Council.

WILLING

While Sukarno said he must obey him, he modified this comment somewhat by saying that "the people must help me in carrying out my task."

That Sukarno was in complete command was best evidenced by the fact that the five points in his manifesto, only one point is now in writing. That is the 1945 revolutionary constitution.

Certainly, most Indonesians seemed to be willing to allow the destinies of the nation to stand on the shoulders of the popular Sukarno, after 11 years of rule. He seems not to have lost a bit of his spell-binding qualities that have won him support from the people despite crisis and crisis. —UPI.

Australia will build world's largest radio telescope

The largest and one of the most powerful radio telescopes in the world, and twenty times the size of the one at Jodrell Bank in England, is to be built in New South Wales at a cost of about £300,000.

The site for the telescope has not been decided on yet but it would have to be out of Sydney and away from any interference from radio and television stations, and Canberra has been considered as a likely spot.

It will be used to study cosmic radio noise in space and will be part of the new radio astronomy centre established in the University of Sydney by the Schools of Physics and Electrical Engineering. This radio telescope which will be known as the Mills Cross will have two "arms" each 40 feet wide and a mile long, and is named after the Australian radio astronomer Dr. B. Y. Mills who has won world-wide scientific acclaim for his design of this huge new instrument.

Professor Butler, deputy head of the School of Physics at the University of Sydney, described the project as one of "enormous magnitude" and it will make Australia one of the major world centres of radio-astronomy. He said this project and others being developed will give Australia the most advanced instruments in the world with which to probe the distant reaches of space." The first section of the telescope would be in operation in about two years and the whole project would take about four years to complete.

New Guinea may be on the brink of a big oil discovery, or another disappointment. The drilling company, The Australian Petroleum Co. Ltd., reported recently that traces of oil had been found in two "relatively thin" sandstone sequences in rugged country at Iohi in Western Papua, about 240 air miles north-west of Port Moresby.

At the time of reporting the well was down to almost 6,800 ft. but it was planned to take it down further before testing the significance of the oil flow already found.

Oil Search Ltd. (Australia) has 15 per cent of the share in APC, the British Petroleum Co., have 43.7 per cent, and Vacuum Oil Co. of New York, 41.3 per cent. In the past few weeks many thousands of shares in Oil Search Ltd. have been bought and sold on the Australian Stock Exchanges, but a very large number of them have been for Papuan and New Guinean residents. There is at present nothing like the speculation that gripped the public at the time of the last oil strike in Puri two years ago where oil flowed at 1,000 barrels a day for weeks, but was later abandoned when increasing quantities of water entered the oil.

In this instance drilling may end at 10,000 ft. or less, on the other hand if geologists and experts consider it doesn't pay, the bore may be taken to 12,000 ft. The result should be known in about a month.

Letters from you to the editor

Most insulting

"A Regular Reader" is really irregular, to say the least, as he wants to dictate to you the policy for running your paper, how you should conduct your business, to write your articles and do things not for his own benefit but to pander to his own unreasonable desires. His letter was most insulting, and the caption was exactly right.

He condemns both "Fairplay" and this "Constant Reader" for their praise of your courage in upholding the highest tradition of the British Press which is to treat all matters without fear or favour, to be strictly impartial and to speak boldly for the sake of

To "A Regular Reader" unacquainted with our democratic system of government and of the press, free-speech and thinking must be strange as the midnight Sun or conversely the noonday Moon, and recalling the recent Li Chuan Case of another "friendly neighbouring country," doubtless he would like to see our editor of the "China Mail" being similarly treated.

dear sir

"A Regular Reader" says that as the case in question was still "fudged" it was up to him to comment on the matter you did. All that one can do in reply is that the case will always remain "fudged" as long as these flotillas of political storms continued to be tossed about in the turbulent sea of public discontent, as shown in the two "dollar-puppet" countries mentioned in your article that has aroused the ire of your hair-brained minded correspondent. Paradoxically, once these undesirable conditions are "liquidated" the situation will no longer be "fudged". It is difficult for an editor of such a highly reputable and respectable paper as the "China Mail" to cross words with his readers, and so it is for the observant readers to take up the issue on his behalf, as in a debate, arguing the points for or against the subject matter for consideration.

There is no doubt that all fair-minded people will support the editor and condemn "A Regular Reader" as most undemocratic in his opinionated narrow view.

A CONSTANT (AND GENTLE) READER.

P.S.—As Shakespeare would have said had he not died prematurely: "Methinks this punk doth protest too much. His diet of hot-dog proclaimeth his race which ocean spanneth from our native land." The clue to "punk's" nationality lies in this reference to "dollar-puppets". Also, as Sherlock Holmes would say: "It is elementary, my dear Watson." Simple deduction, pure logic. Am I right, "A.R.R.?"

dear sir

More palatable

I do not pretend to know what your really discerning readers think of Baxter & Co., but if I am to be literally well fed not with romance of the tear-inducing kind, of course), I believe your so-called novelists and literary louts would provide more palatable虚构 than would the Beaverbrook school of writers.

BRITAIN NO LONGER THE BOSS

London, Nov. 22.

The Duke of Devonshire, new under-secretary for Commonwealth relations, last night said the days when Britain had the ultimate responsibility for the affairs of a country in the Commonwealth were over for ever.

Were the Commonwealth relations office to try to tell member countries what to do in any given situation, the concept of the Commonwealth would be shattered "beyond hope of repair," he told the Insurance Institute of London.

"No effort on the part of the British Government would be too great in its endeavour to find a settlement over the Central African Federation which would be agreeable to all the governments concerned," the Duke said.

Miss Douglas flew in last night from California with a big camera crew.

The star of "6-5 Special" and other TV programmes is interviewing the servicemen for "TV Family Favourites."

The programme will be shown before the Christmas roundup and the Queen's Speech on Christmas Day.

Malayan Prime Minister Tengku Abdul Rahman lunched today with several top British government and party leaders.

He was guest of honour at a luncheon given by Lord Perth,

Minister of State for Colonial Affairs.—UPI.

The plotting habit — now it spreads to the Academy...

As everyone appears to be plotting in Paris these days it is scarcely surprising that the conspiratorial fever should have affected even so august a body as the French Academy.

The Academy plot is a delicious one and richly deserves to succeed.

Somnolent

It is to elect to the Academy — which in its somnolent conservatism makes the Atheneum Club look a junior officers' mess — a member of the central committee of the French Communist party.

The Communist in question happens to be, in the opinion of many, France's greatest living man, 63-year-old Louis Aragon.

Will he make it?

There is an excellent chance that he will and very largely because he will have the powerful behind-the-scenes backing of General de Gaulle himself.

Inside the Academy itself the principal organiser of the campaign to elect Aragon is appropriately enough Jean Cocteau, whose own election to the Academy provided a clear warning that its days as a backwater of conservatism were moving to a close.

He has rallied to his cause such distinguished writers as Pierre Benoit, Marcel Achard, Henri de Montherlant, Andre Maurois and Francois Mauriac. His most bitter opponents are General Weygand and Marshal Jullian.

A grey-haired, handsome man, Aragon retains the popish mannerisms of a fashionable poet which he was before he became a Communist in 1930 but he can be as primitive and impersonal in political matters as a Soviet commissar.

He wrote a notorious obituary to Stalin. It began: "Only once before in my life have I felt such a sense of sorrow and personal loss and that was after the death of my mother."

He also once pronounced that every time he finished work "I always ask myself what would Comrade Stalin think of this?"

Oddly enough, despite these debased standards his work has continued to flower — in talent with the years.

Brainwashed

It is in a way fortunate that a professional army officer, 40-year-old Colonel Jean Garde is among the 16 accused in the recent trial of the ringleaders of last January's anti-de Gaulle riot.

Garde, handsome, bemused, with a monarchial air, was in the witness-box for two days and during that time he gave the nation a first hand view of the type of Frankenstein the professional section of the army had become.

Garde has been at war since 1939 and he is the perfect example of the type of French officer who survived defeat and internment in Indo-China.

Brainwashed by their Chinese and Indo-Chinese captors they returned to France convinced that brainwashing was the new military magic which could avert defeat in any future colonial war.

Garde, who was head of the French Army Psychological Warfare Dept., talks like a man who has been subconsciously converted to Communism.

The words Comrade and Comrades are always on his lips. He speaks communism everywhere. Much of his evidence was truthfully only in the sense that he clearly believed that himself. To any outsider it sounded like the melodramatic gibberish of a thriller-writer.

There is persistent talk in Paris that some French army officers have made contact with the French Communist Party in an effort to secure the Party's neutrality, if the army should seize power.

Listening to Garde one can well believe the story.

Yves St. Laurent has now been given his final discharge from the army.

Paris

Comrade

It is only after he has completely recovered that he will consider his professional future and especially in the light of his replacement as chief designer at Dior by Marc Bohan.

Songbird

I was fascinated by an attractive blonde who was one of a number of guests at a table presided over by Mr Charles Clore in a fashionable Paris restaurant.

She had remained utterly silent throughout the dinner until suddenly she reduced everyone else to stunned silence by bursting into an operatic aria.

This lasted for a full tense two minutes after which she re-entered her customary silence for the remainder of the meal.

QUOTE

—by President de Gaulle, speaking at Menton recently in a "meet-the-people" tour:

PUBLIC affairs belong to the State. The State does not tolerate certain people seeking gain for themselves, for the trade unions, for the army, for the Press, or for any other private body that can pretend to judge the conduct of France.

He left the army hospital in which he has been undergoing treatment for a severe nervous breakdown ever since his call-up three months ago, and he was moved directly to a private clinic to continue treatment. He was given prolonged sleeping treatment at the military hospital.

After he leaves the clinic he will undergo a long period of convalescence in Switzerland.

That conduct belongs to those who are in charge of her and, in the first instance, me.

M stands for Montand Marilyn, Miller and "Misfits"

THE perfect marriage of Marilyn Monroe to Arthur Miller has come unstuck after four years.

It was, I suppose, inevitable. Although when they were wed—and it was an unlikely wedding—their friends said: "It is the perfect match. With her brains and his body what can go wrong?"

Arthur Miller said: "I did not know my parents, think she is just a genius." I grew up in an orphanage and through my two previous marriages I had no real home.

"That is why I became Jewish like my husband Arthur. I figured that if the Jews had just finished a film, "The Misfits," which he wrote for her, and which jointly they helped finance. Ironically it was shot in Reno, Nevada, which by tradition is the place where Hollywood stars go for divorce.

It is also significant that "The Misfits" is the first original work to come from the pen of Arthur Miller, who wrote such hits as "Death of a Salesman" and "View from the Bridge," since his marriage.

Miss Monroe's career on the other hand has blossomed. No longer is she considered merely a sex symbol but a comedy actress with a high degree of ability. So where has the marriage failed? Probably I would say the fact that Monroe needed Miller too much. She called him "Papa" and he gave her a security in living that hitherto she had lacked.

Miller, with his solid pipe smoking and his own background of the disturbed and depression-laden thirties and the misery of the "little" with the McCarthy purge in America, gave her comfort. Until now.

Fear

"When I met his parents for the first time before we were married," she told me one night in their New York apartment, "and his mother made me loxshen soup (a form of chicken soup with thin strips of pasta in it). I fell for the first time I had a mother and father of my own...some roots...somewhere to belong."

During their marriage he stood by at the side of the set and encouraged her when things went wrong (as they often did) and took her home at night in what they laughingly called "the get-away car."

"She has worked and he has been idle except for this 'Misfits' script. And it has probably been too much for both of them."

An affair

Miller, with his solid pipe smoking and his own background of the disturbed and depression-laden thirties and the misery of the "little" with the McCarthy purge in America, gave her comfort. Until now.

"She is a complete realist about everything and she estimates any situation on the basis of the sternest necessities."

So Monroe grappled at the part Miller had written in "The Misfits". It is about a woman searching, in his words, "for a relationship" who is disturbed by the thoughts of her parents who kept "disappearing" when she was a child.

"Above all," said Miller, "she is a girl who will not sell herself easily to society. When I finished writing it I knew it had to be Marilyn, and we without Marilyn. Arthur Miller will return to his writing in his bare, simple "work room" at his country home in Connecticut.

I don't know about Mr Miller, but I believe Marilyn will marry again. Despite her fears and her anxieties she is a butterfly made of iron. She wants to have children and she needs to have a home because she knows that when you are old you can't just curl up with a career."

London Express Service.

Without Arthur Miller, Marilyn Monroe will turn more and more to the Strasberg for advice. Her future career and her happiness will depend on how she translates that advice.

SOUTHS bid his hand a trifle too strongly and when he looked at the dummy it became apparent to him that he had no legitimate play for his slam.

At the same time he saw no reason to give up so he went right up with dummy's ace of clubs and false-chirped with the eight from his own hand. Since East had played the seven spot this made it possible for that play to be a strength signal.

Then South played a spade to the ace and a second spade which West won with the king.

East dropped the nine and six of spades in that order.

It wouldn't be hard for you readers to lead a diamond to the ace at this point and it shouldn't have been hard for West.

To start with, East might well have played the king of clubs at trick one if he held that card, but that really did not matter. East had played the nine of spades before he played the six. He could not want a ruff, so he must have meant those spades as suit preference and a call for diamonds—the higher suit.

Of course, this is somewhat far-fetched, but this hand was played in an important match between top players and it wasn't too hard for West. He did lead the diamond.

RECENTLY was London Fashion Week. Leading wholesale designers showed the world the pretty summer clothes they have dreamed up for summer 1961. Such (writes Barbara Grigge) is the Alice-in-Wonderland situation the fashion business has got itself into that rows of these summer clothes will be going into the shops at the end of this month, before Christmas.

How and why? Simple: wholesale houses show earlier and earlier these days; deliveries to shops start earlier and earlier. So clothes sell out earlier and earlier—ever tried to buy a cotton dress in June?

This July-at-Christmas system has no particular snags for wholesaler or retailer. Either way the clothes get sold. But from your point of view and mine it has two serious disadvantages.

FIRST: It is becoming increasingly difficult to buy the clothes FOR the season DURING the season; cottons in June, warm woollens in December.

SECOND: Paris now reaches us with a full season's lag and more—Dior's sleeveless long-torso look, for instance, made to look very Beat in dark winter wools, will be flooding the shops in summer cottons.

Since the fashion market here isn't mammoth enough to have four or five seasons a year as they do in America, there doesn't seem much hope of this crazy situation improving. Unless of course we get to the stage where autumn 1962 clothes are reaching the shops by January 1962...

DOWN TO DETAILS

SUMMER '61 looks like being the most formal season in fashion since the Coronation. And, for good measure, many of the thirty wholesale houses who showed their new season's collections seem to have euced their designs to heat-wave weather.

Outstanding: for the housewife—slim, sleeveless linen numbers by Laeta Romage. Some with a tightly cinched midriff, some with an easy suggestion of waistline—all in bold, clear colours. For the girl-about-town—whitecollared, grey flannel shirt-dresses, pale tweed suits and the straight silk dress with endless variations on the blouse on top.

For her mother—white pleated Tricot dresses; formal silk shantung, cut simple and classically by Susan Small.

The feeling throughout the 300 or so garments on parade was of unequivocal, compleat good taste. The only fresh, exciting tangent—scarlet, blue and white teenager dresses in full swing with pleats and Done I add that what stole the thunder was NOT a dancer-dress, a lawn cotton shirt-waist, or a model girl. It was the hat collection by Otto Lucas.

Each hat was streets ahead of the dress it was shown with: sometimes a cloche reminiscent of the thirties, or a gaily colored straw, but most times a delicious mobcap of flower petals.

"It doesn't grow," said Knarf.

"You just get it."

"What does it look like?"

General Tin asked eagerly.

"A hamburger tastes like a hamburger," said Knarf, "and that's what it looks like."

"But . . ." began General Tin.

Handi likes ice cream

"But here Handi broke in to say that what she liked best was ice cream."

"And I don't know where it comes from," she added quickly, "except that it's made of ice and cream and lots of sugar. It's very cold. It's very delicious. And if you don't eat it right away, it melts."

"Well," said General Tin, "different folk eat different things. Squirrels eat acorns. Dogs eat bones. Cats eat fish. Crocodiles eat people."

Shadows are alarmed

"They do?" Knarf and Handi shouted in alarm.

"When they're good and hungry, they do," said General Tin.

"But People don't eat Crocodiles," he added. "It's hard to know what everyone does like best."

General Tin explains

"Wiffle pie," said General Tin. "It's made out of fresh-picked wiffles."

"What are wiffles?" asked Knarf.

"Wiffles," said General Tin. "Is what you make wiffle pie out of?"

"Where do wiffles grow? And what do they look like?" asked Handi.

"Wiffles," said General Tin, looking at Handi as though he couldn't understand why a girl as smart as she was didn't know where wiffles came from and what they looked like, "come from Wiffeland. And what should they look like except other wiffles."

No use trying

There didn't seem to be very much use trying to find out from General Tin any more about wiffles.

"And if you asked me," General Tin continued, "what I liked next to wiffle pie..." He paused. "Are you going to ask me?" he asked.

Feeling immensely relieved that they are at last on their way home, Rupert and Margot trot in the direction pointed out by the man, keeping the sun behind them.

"Hello, he was quite right. Here's the barbed wire fence that guarded his factory," says Rupert. "Oh

Another joint meeting to be held on December 3

London, Nov. 22. The threatened professional footballers' strike seems to have been postponed as a result of a three-and-a-quarter hour meeting in London today.

Representatives of the Football League, the Ministry of Labour Conciliation Board, and the Professional Footballers' Association representatives met and agreed to have another meeting on December 3.

CLUB-POLICE RUGBY MATCH TODAY

By 'PROP'

The Club meet the Police today at the Club Stadium in a return rugby match which the police will be all out to win, in order to reverse the result of the last meeting between these two old rivals.

This game starts at 3.30 pm and will be preceded by a match between the Club Selection and the Navy, which starts at 3.30 pm.

Police may well be in for a surprise in the later game as the Club will be without Lawyer, Scruby, Hall and Bedford, and may well find themselves having to hunt harder for the ball in the loose to offset the loss of their regular becker.

Club have an unbeaten record to defend, and this game could well be the toughest that they have had to date.

Another match takes place tomorrow at 3.30 pm at Army Boundary-street ground. This will be between the 14th Field Regiment RA and the RAF.

TODAY'S TEAMS

Club: Moore, D'Eath, Kennedy, McTavish, Kelly, Wilson, Tancock, Menzies, Pyle, Williams, Ross, A. D. C. Smith, Berresford, Newbiggin, Johnson.

Police: Hobbs, Lloyd, Calderwood, Johnston, Culkin, Hollis, Blaich, MacDonald, Kiell, Baker, O'Brien, O'Riordan, McEwan, Ross, Roberts.

Club Selection: Steward, Ingle, Clubb, Wiggett, Jones, Hanson-Abbott, Wilkins, Perkins, Bridgeman, Boswell, Skinner, Collins, Locking, Johnston, Thorburn.

Would-be 'Strikers'

This is how the nearly 200 professional soccer players, representing more than 30 clubs in the South of England, listened to the deliberations and discussions of the Professional Footballers' Association meeting in a London hotel last week. Sometimes smiling, sometimes grim—these men heard pleas for action, and advice to wait a little longer.

TEST CAPTAIN DEFENDS MECKIFF

Reports on his innocuous straighter-arm bowling are arrant nonsense'

Melbourne, Nov. 22. Reports in England that Ian Meckiff's "straighter-arm" bowling was innocuous were today described as "arrant nonsense" by Ian Johnson, Australia's former Test captain. Commenting on Meckiff's bowling for Victoria against the West Indies, Johnson said: "He was no more innocuous on this Melbourne pitch than West Indies fast bowlers Wesley Hall and Chester Watson."

Johnson said Meckiff was "just as fast" as he was when

LIONISED

There is in Italy, it is learned, a referee named Longo. He is said to have no nerves and to control excited crowds with the minimum of trouble.

Not surprising. In private life, Signor Longo is a lion-tamer.—London Express Service.

"The pitch was one of the slowest in my memory," Lorraine Miller, Tyson, Statheam and Truman would have said if it!" Meckiff's figures when West Indies totalled 493 were 214-122-21.

Johnson said Meckiff was "just as fast" as he was when MCC were in Australia in 1958-59. But he had been under a great strain as the centre of the straight-arm controversy. He was also below top form because rain restricted cricket this season in Melbourne.

Johnson advised critics to wait and see a less strained Meckiff in a quicker wicket "then we may hear a different story."

Added worry for 25-year-old Meckiff is that his wife Loraine is expecting a baby any hour. He has been making frequent telephone calls from the ground to his home.

No camouflage

Meckiff said today he had not camouflaged his bowling action. "My wrist and arm are straighter at the start of my swing but my action has not changed."

"I thought I bowled as fast as I have in the past. I must admit I failed to move the ball in the air or off the pitch but neither did Hall, Watson and Gaunt [who opened the bowling with Meckiff]."

Mrs Meckiff said: "I know Ian has been under a strain with all this throwing business but he has never complained. It has made him most determined to do well."—China Mail Special.

The proposal means the American League would operate next year with only one new franchise, the new Washington Club that fills the vacancy in the nation's capital created by the transfer of the Senators to Minneapolis-St Paul. It would depend on the National League adding one franchise at once—presumably either Houston or New York, scheduled now for National League franchises in 1962.

The AL proposal then would be that an Inter-League schedule be worked out, with American League and National League teams playing a few games against clubs from the other League.

Each club would play an overall 100-game schedule.

John Surtees at the crossroads

By DEREK JOHN

Has John Surtees, seven times world motor-cycling champion, ridden his last race on a motor-cycle?

I believe that this is almost certainly the case, that he will concentrate in the future on racing cars. At 28, Britain's greatest ever motor-cycling ace wants to become a champion on four wheels.

Indeed, Surtees would like to continue taking part in both sports. But he knows from experience that modern sport demands single-minded dedication if you are going to become a world-beater.

But the name of Surtees need not disappear from motorcycle racing. John's younger brother Norman has made a successful debut on road circuits this year and he should begin to make a name for himself in 1961.

We give the tournament players our full support.

I believe that the selectors have blundered badly. The omission of Brace is as devastating as the dropping last season of England's Peter Jackson, another player of genius; almost certainly the greatest wing-three-quarter in the world today.

Why are these giants of sport ignored?

Too good

Their great handicap is their unorthodox. Their methods do not conform to the strict pattern of play which the selectors favour.

Brace, for example, hates negative play and the "we must not lose" attitude which is so often in evidence in international rugby.

in the book—easily the most exciting exhibition of open rugby I have seen for years. He is again in brilliant form this season.

Ains, such is Brace's genius for the unexpected that he can mystify his own partners. His unorthodox play demands—and deserves—much long practice with a regular fly-half partner.

Brace has attacked the ruling that bars international teams training together for more than 48 hours before a match. He still recalls ruefully how, on his Welsh debut, he did not meet his partner Cliff Morgan until the eve of the game.

But, tragically, Brace seems to be fighting a losing battle for recognition. No one can fairly say that he is not good enough for international rugby. The sombre truth is that he is TOO GOOD.

Now it seems that Brace is in the wilderness again. He has not been named for the Welsh trials and his country is expected to face the mighty Springboks without him on December 3.

A change from country to city life was made by more than 50 farm families yesterday.

They moved from homes in Shek Pik Village, Lantau Island, like the one above to five-storey tenement blocks in urban Tsun Wan (right).

More than 200 people made the move. Their old homes were on the site of Shek Pik Reservoir, to be completed by 1963.

All who had owned agricultural land at Shek Pik will be given shops on the ground floor of the modern blocks. Flats were given according to the number of people in a family, and the size of the home they had vacated at Shek Pik.

Village representative Tso Moon-hay said they were all happy at the prospects of their new life.

HK to be centre for distribution of U.S. tractors

Hongkong is to become a distribution centre in Southeast Asia for the International Harvester Export Co. of Chicago, for its crawler tractors which are used for heavy construction work.

An initial shipment of six tractors has arrived from the United States, and were off-loaded at the Kowloon Wharf this morning.

Mr Paul Wood, special representative of the company and President of the company in the Philippines, said this morning that Hongkong has been chosen as the distribution centre in this part of the world because of its low handling costs, good handling facilities and free port privileges.

He said his company intended to keep a regular stock of tractors here, so as to save buyers' time.

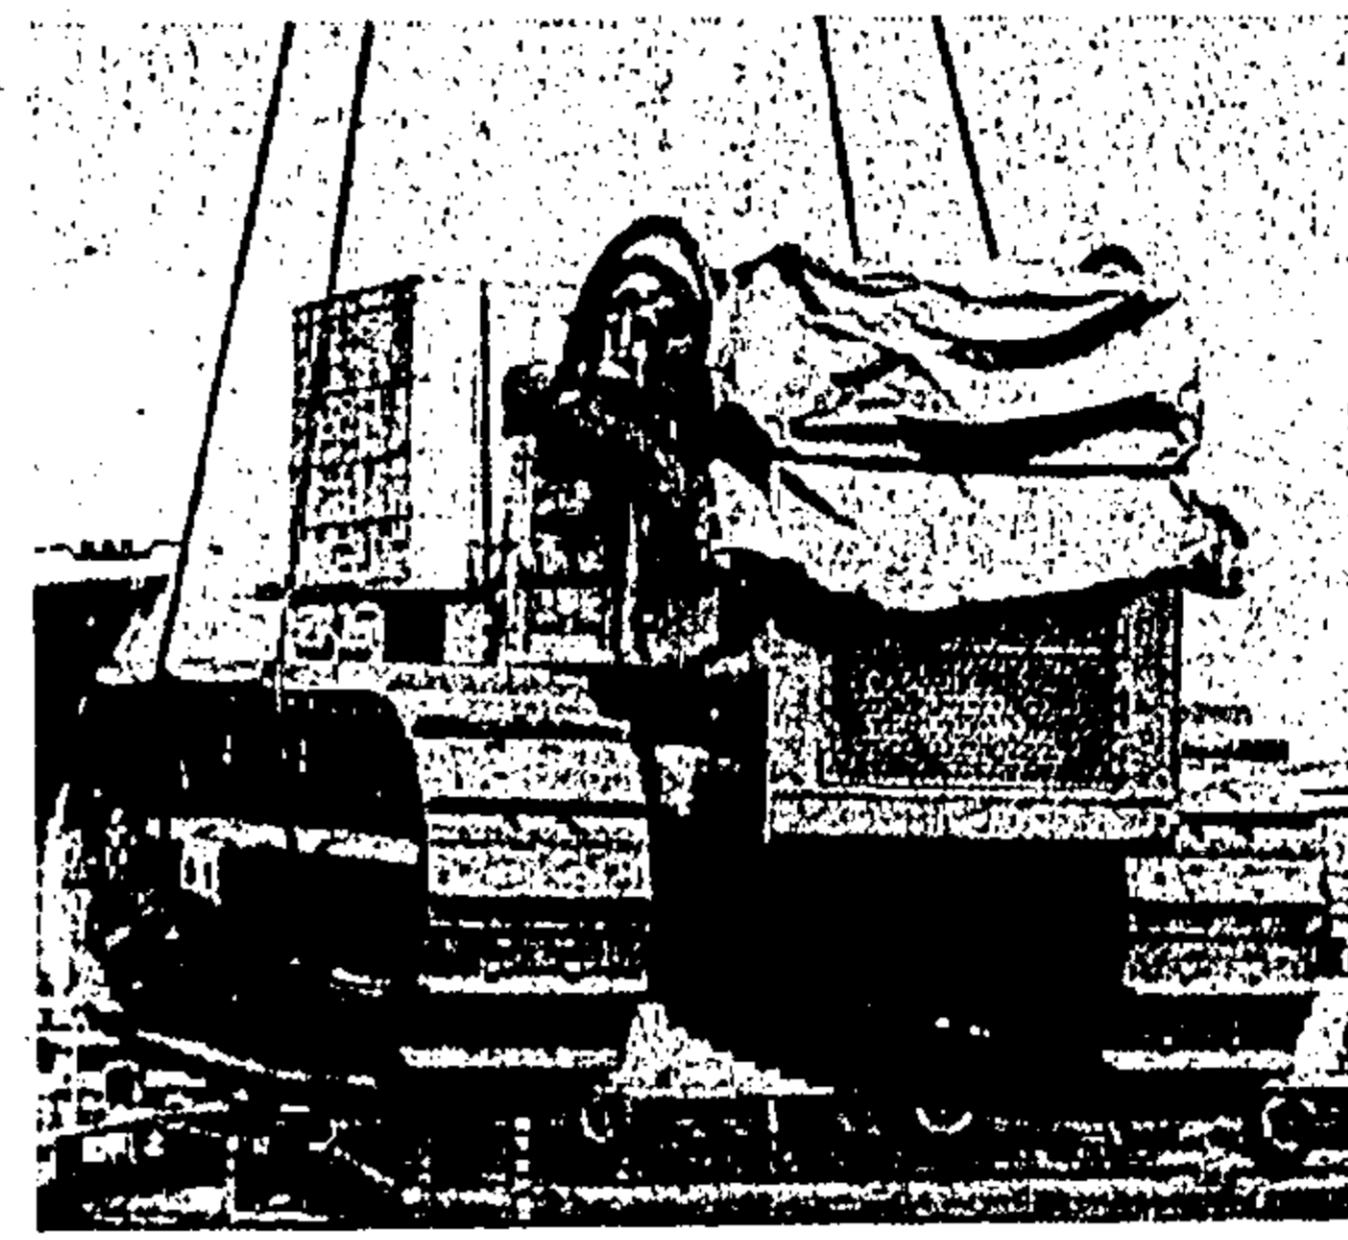

Two orders

The present shipment consists of three sets of different types and sizes. The heaviest type is the TD 250, which costs about $200,000 each.

While the tractors were on their way here, the American Pioneer Mill, orders for the purchase of two of the tractors were placed, one locally and the other in Colombo, Ceylon.

In addition to Mr. Wood, Mr. Carl Granquist, Vice-President of the company, were among others present at the unloading.

Both are on a visit here on the course of a business inspection tour to the Far East.

HONGKONG TEXTILE QUOTA

London, Nov. 22.—Mr Walter Bormley, Davenport (Conservative), asked the President of the Board of Trade in the House of Commons today if he is satisfied that the free import of ready-made clothing from Hongkong is not prejudicing the position of cotton manufacturers in this country; and if he will make a statement.

REPLY

Mr. Reginald Maudling in a written reply said: "I am aware imports of ready-made clothing from Hongkong have increased, but the undertaking of the Hongkong textile industry to limit exports of cotton goods to the United Kingdom provides for a corresponding reduction in the quota for cotton piece goods."—Reuter.

A nine-year-old girl, Tai Kam-fong, described how she saw her mother, Chan Suet-fong, stabbed, at the Criminal Sessions this morning. Kwong Kwong is accused of murdering Chan Suet-fong at her home, 25, Graham-street, Hongkong, on July 21.

Tai Kam-fong said she was writing on a bunk in one cubicle of the ground floor flat when she saw her mother coming out of another cubicle with a bundle of books on her shoulder.

She then saw Kwong Kwong push her mother down and stab her once with a knife.

In the head

"My eldest sister saw this and rushed to my mother. Kwong Kwong stabbed my sister once in the head and in the back when she was holding my mother, and then my sister and my mother ran away."

"My mother was running to the kitchen and was followed by Kwong who stabbed her repeatedly. I was in great fear and ran towards the shop from away from the bunk."

"My grandfather, Tai-cheuk, was present when Kwong was stabbing my mother, and tried to stop him."

Evidence was also given this morning by Tsang Fan, a toker of the shop premises forming the front of the ground floor flat where Chan was killed.

Tsang Fan said he saw Kwong stabbing Chan Suet-fong and was afraid he might

No reply

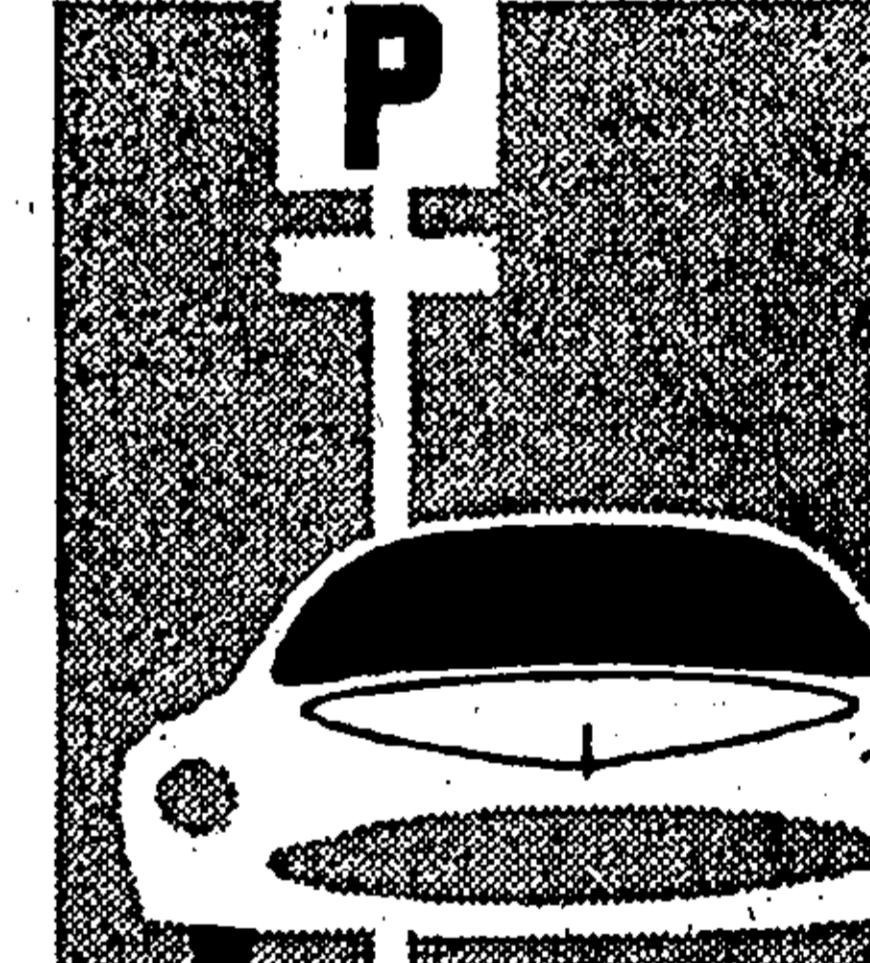

"I told him he had been arrested and said why, but he did not reply. I charged him formally at the Central charge room the same day and had an interpreter to speak to Kwong, but still the prisoner did not reply except to say 'yes.' I understand when asked 'do you understand?'

Mr Justice W. A. Blair-Kerr adjourned the hearing until 2.30 pm today, when the psychiatrist, Dr C. M. Chung, is to be called to give evidence.
